Title Insurance Special Rule for Unique and Unusual Conditions

If a risk demonstrates unique or exceptional exposure conditions, such that the standard rating procedure fails to establish a fair and reasonable rate, the risk may be assessed on an individual basis. Requests for such assessment must be submitted to the insurance commissioner, accompanied by detailed evidence outlining the reasons for the request and providing comprehensive supporting information. It's essential to ensure that such special treatment complies with all relevant regulations, particularly those concerning inducements and rebates in title insurance, as outlined in K.S.A. 40-2404(14). These customized rates must be filed with the commissioner of insurance before they can be quoted or implemented.

If a risk demonstrates unique or exceptional exposure conditions, such that the standard rating procedure fails to establish a fair and reasonable rate, the risk may be assessed on an individual basis. Requests for such assessment must be submitted to the insurance commissioner, accompanied by detailed evidence outlining the reasons for the request and providing comprehensive supporting information. It's essential to ensure that such special treatment complies with all relevant regulations, particularly those concerning inducements and rebates in title insurance, as outlined in K.S.A. 40-2404(14). These customized rates must be filed with the commissioner of insurance before they can be quoted or implemented.
